Excerpt: ... V. Observations on the Nature and Treatment of the Malignant or Yellow Fever, which prevailed in the Island of Grenada, W. I. in the years 1793, 94, and 95, in a letter to David Hosack, M. D. &c. from John Stewart, M. D. Src. #e.# New-York, Nov. 12th, 1805. Dear Sir, I Have received your favour of this date, desiring information concerning the fever which appeared, and proved so fatal, in Grenada, in March, 1793. I feel much disposed to comply with your request, but regret that my time will not allow me to do so in a manner satisfactory to myself; at all events, I hope you will make allowance for any inaccuracy I may commit in referring to circumstances which occurred so long as twelve years ago, especially, as I am possessed of no memorandum respecting the disease, all my papers having been destroyed in the insurrection which occurred in that island in 1795. It may be necessary to premise, that I had been engaged in an extensive practice in the quarters of St. Andrews and None can be ignorant of the name of Dr. Stewart, who are at all acquainted with the controversy which has so long engaged the attention of medical writer?, relative to the nature and character of the yellow-fever, as it has prevailed in the United States, and in different parts of Europe. Our readers will recognise in him one who occupies a distinguished place in the list of those great men who have supported and defended the doctrine of the contagious nature and specific form of this disease. His great learning, and extensive practical knowledge, eminently qualify him to act as umpire on this subject, and stamp his opinions with an authority not to be impeached by the gross aspersions and futile reasonings of a host of ordinary writers.--f. St. Patricks for nineteen years previous...
