But I will challenge the Scottish to distinguish itself from the holy league of France. The difference I see in the catholic Christianity of the one, and the reformed Christianity of the other. But if it be Christianity in the one for subjects to rise against their sovereign to secure religion, no more than in the other to reform it, the religion of the one will be as far from truly reformed as the religion of the other from truly catholic. And for the weight of this point in religion, it is well enough known, that king James of good memory, and the best pens of his time, have stiled this the heresy of Hildebrandk: because Pope Gregory VII., Hildebrand by name, was the first that raised subjects against their sovereigns, being excommunicate, by loosing them of their allegiance. Not without cause. So deeply is it rooted in Christianity, consisting in bearing Christs cross, to continue in that state of this world wherein they are called to be Christians. For as they must needs renounce Christs cross, which they lay upon their adversaries, so they do peremptorily obstruct the prevailing of Christianity, when they clear it not of the*
